Leadership Research Data Focus

In this section we highlight some data from recent research about leaders and management practice if you are intrigued by the findings and wish to learn more please follow the links provided.

The University of St Gallen's Executive School of Management, Technology and Law has recently published its bi-annual survey of executive education. The survey is conducted throughout Europe, though the majority of respondents are from the German-speaking areas. The standout feature of the survey was the fact that 93% of respondents have put executive leadership development as their first or second priority for their organization in terms of its future success. Digging deeper into what makes executive education effective the survey highlights the key importance of C-level involvement and the continuing barriers with technology... for the full report go to: <http://www.es.unisg.ch/seer>

Effectiveness of executive learning and development

Despite much discussion about the need for leadership development in corporate and public organizations, and the considerable industry that surrounds it, this is the first authoritative periodical focused entirely on this area.

Developing Leaders looks at the critical confluence between the provision of executive education and the real everyday needs of organizations to strengthen their management teams, their corporate performance, and their leadership.

The publication presents the latest thinking and most recent developments in both academic and commercial executive education provision worldwide, what it is achieving and which are the best models for success, sharing the experience and expertise of top leaders and world class educators.

Developing Leaders is published in both hardcopy and online “page turning” format. The quarterly magazine complements the IEDP website - the definitive resource for executive developers worldwide.
