Shouldn't we do more action research?

WHY

One viable yet underutilized mode to tackle grand challenges

One answer to calls for more engaged, activist scholarship

Collaboration, reflexivity and (some) real-world impact built in

It's FUN!

Create knowledge that is actually useful in practice

Transforming ecosystems, organizations – and ourselves

(NOT)

Action research is NOT real research

Isn't a PhD complicated enough with a more established method?

I want complete control over my research

I'm aiming for a career in academia and need to publish co-creating knowing with, not about people

HOW

integrate 1st, 2nd & 3rd person research and practice build on the past, take place in the present with the goal of shaping the future learning and creating impact in iterative cycles of action and reflection share your thoughts action-research.link/aom2024survey

Join us at AoM 2024 for discussion and co-creation of a new vision of action research

Monday, Aug 12, 2024, 9:45 AM - 11:15AM Marriott, 5th Floor / Scottsdale

Carol Gorelick sets the stage for an interactive and collaborative learning experience

Bill Torbert pitches Collaborative Developmental Action Inquiry (CDAI) as the key modality in action research

Danny van Montfort, Freek Sanders and Tobias Fehr-Bosshard provide spotlights from their ongoing action research PhD journeys and their experimentations with CDAI

And hopefully YOU will share your insights and help co-create new ideas during an interactive World Café session find out more about this presenter symposium Advancing Action Research for Personal, Team and Organizational Transformation action-research.link/aom2024symposium